

Another absorbing black metal creature from Poland that intelligently combines intensity and sickness. The music itself is not too sophisticated, but has got a huge load of emotions. I am sure you are going to hear about this band in the future, that's for sure. "Lucifer, my redeemer" is the first song out of four that this demos consists of. It gives off a schizophrenic atmosphere with a powerful load of aggression. It all is perfectly balanced. A massive guitar riff stands out. The guitar is the leading instrument here, that's for sure. "Paterin" has got this weird initial atmosphere – this track is some more condensed extremity with neatly interwoven slow-downs and furious vocal.

The next comes "Universal Ascendency of Evil." Initially, it is kind of relaxed as the beginning is slightly psychedelic, but don't fool yourselves, it will not be like that. Shortly after, some huge load of energy is released, the drummer knows what's this all about and one can see some potential in the guitar parts. Last comes the title track "Nekrape," what an obnoxious and brutal this track really is. It slows down a little but tortures a listener like fucking hell! Ok, the NEKRAP stuff goes where it ought to go. We have got to wait patiently for the next chapters of this band and all who want to get in touch, go and write to:
